'A master of seagoing adventure.' Clive Cussler

Richard and Robin Mariner return to Benin la Bas, four years after helping President Julius Chaka take control of the West African nation.

Invited to attend a Presidential conference on behalf of Heritage Mariner, Richard and Robin arrive in the sweltering oil-rich delta.

Meanwhile, the President's daughter Celine and her friend Anastasia are involved in running a school and medical centre upriver of the delta, which falls under attack by a swarm of terrorist militia headed by General Moses Nlong.

Robin Mariner is asked by the President to rescue the two women.

What Robin encounters upon arriving at the school and orphanage is an occupied fortress. Accomplishing her mission may prove difficult, if not impossible.

Richard Mariner awaits details on Robin's rescue mission. After feeble attempts are suggested in the President's palace to aid the rescue party, Richard creates a plan of his own.

Tested in the humidity of the dark and unfamiliar delta, can Robin Mariner save Celine and Anastasia before it's too late?
