After screwing up in court, my boss and mentor sends me to his lake house for some mandatory R&R. The rules? No phone, no laptop, and stay far away from his next-door neighbor Jake, who he's suing over a land dispute. Then I catch Jake skinny-dipping. And he catches me watching.

But the more I get to know Jake, the more I'm sure my boss is wrong about him—and that the feud between them runs deeper than property lines.

I love my job. But I just might love my boss's enemy, too. And unless I can force these two warring sides to find the truth, I could lose both.

Note: this book was previously published as Her Property and has been newly expanded and updated to first person point of view.
