A dream play about two Mexican women exiled in Hollywood's maze of mirrors.

Set in Venice the day Orson Welles died, this extraordinary play relentlessly stretches the imagination with artistic reveries and supernatural fantasies.

Taken from the collection, Latin American Plays, an essential to the fascinating but largely unexplored theatre of Latin America, Orchids in the Moonlight by Carlos Fuentes is 'rich in language and movement, fantasy and reality, sensuality and cruelty; as iconoclastic as the magic realist boom of the 1960s' (Scotland on Sunday).

The full collection features new translations of five contemporary plays written by some of the region's most exciting writers. Each play is accompanied by an illuminating interview with its author conducted by the theatre director, Sebastian Doggart, who has also selected and translated the plays and provided an introductory history of Latin American drama.

The collection also includes:

Rappaccini's Daughter by Octavio Paz

A play by the Mexican Nobel laureate.

Night of the Assassins by José Triana

A controversial Cuban play in which three siblings plot the murder of their parents.

Saying Yes by Griselda Gambaro

A grotesque comedy from Argentina about man's inhumanity to man.

Mistress of Desires by Mario Vargas Llosa

Peru's most acclaimed writer interweaves reality and fantasy in an erotically charged tale.
