The tradition is faulty, how can one unborn child send another unborn child on errand?

The elders cannot know everything but the little they know is important to guide the youth. The seniority between Taiwo and Kehinde is a question that only God can answer, but in order to allow peace to reign the elders in Yorubaland have given the senior to Kehinde according to Yoruba tradition, that when two people are going out the younger goes in the front while the elder follows it was like that in time of our fathers and it will continue to be like that until the creator himself answer the question.
