Soon their love blossomed, and they decided to embark on a lifelong journey together, with John's passion for serving in the military leading their way. This decision would forever change Lisa's life, challenging her in ways she never anticipated.

PCS: A New Way of Life

As Lisa and John delved deeper into their military life, they experienced their first Permanent Change of Station, moving from their small town to a base thousands of miles away. The process was not only physically demanding but also emotionally draining. Leaving behind their friends and family, Lisa struggled to adapt to a completely new environment.

The frequent moves and uncertainty of their future became a part of their reality, with Lisa realizing the need to develop resilience and a positive mindset. She understood the importance of providing unwavering support to her husband while also taking care of her own mental and emotional well-being.

A Supportive Community

As Lisa navigated the challenges of military life, she discovered an incredible support network within their military community. The bonds she formed with other spouses became a source of strength and encouragement, offering guidance in times of uncertainty.

The community's camaraderie inspired Lisa to extend her hand and help fellow military spouses who struggled with the same challenges. She found solace in uplifting others, becoming a role model and pillar of strength.

A Passion Unearthed

Throughout their PCS journey, Lisa discovered a hidden passion for writing. As she honed her skills and shared her experiences through various platforms, she quickly gained recognition for her captivating storytelling ability.

Through her words, Lisa not only conveyed the ups and downs of military life but also shed light on the sacrifices and triumphs of military families across the nation. Her ability to articulate the unspoken emotions resonated with countless individuals facing similar situations.

Resilience and Personal Transformation

Lisa's journey has been a testament to resilience and personal growth. What began as a daunting path filled with uncertainty has transformed into an empowering expedition of self-discovery.

Her unwavering support for her husband, her dedication to her military community, and her commitment to inspiring others have placed Lisa on an incredible trajectory of personal fulfillment. Through her writing, Lisa continues to touch the hearts of millions, turning her PCS journey into a powerful source of inspiration.

Looking Ahead

As Lisa and John prepare for yet another Permanent Change of Station, their experiences have prepared them for a future filled with possibilities. Lisa's writing has opened doors to opportunities she never imagined, enabling her to inspire and empower others while adapting to new environments.

As they embark on their next adventure, Lisa Stice's story serves as a reminder of the strength and resilience that lies within each of us. In a world that constantly challenges us, her journey shows that transformation is possible, and growth can be found even in the most unexpected circumstances.

The story of Permanent Change of Station Lisa Stice is one of a remarkable woman who turned adversity into opportunity, showcasing the power of determination, love, and the unwavering spirit of military families – an inspiring tale worth sharing.

A PERFECT GIFT OF POETRY FOR MILITARY FAMILIES AND MOTHERS—AND THE PEOPLE WHO LOVE THEM!

With humor and grace, Lisa Stice (author of the previously published Uniform, Aldrich Press, 2016) lovingly interrogates and illuminates life in a military family.

"Her close observations of childhood magic and household routines, quietly set against ever-present question-marks of wartime deployment and displacement, are essential and timely insights into the modern military family experience," says the publisher.

"If you've ever been a military kid, parent, or spouse—regardless of age or branch or era—you'll find a welcome home in her words."

Together with her toddler daughter and little dog Seamus, Stice explores the in-betweens of separation and connection, and the quest for finding one's place in the world—whether child or adult.

Stice's signature style is open and accessible—this is poetry for people who think they don't read poetry. Frequently, for example, she borrows phrases from texts she finds readily at hand around the house, including quotations from Sun Tzu's "The Art of War," and Dr. Seuss's "The Sneetches."

In another point of entry, the family's beloved Norwich Terrier often appears as a sentry, companion, and guide.

In one poem, "The Dog Speaks," Stice writes:

He says, I can't leave.

This place is mine—

I claimed all the trees.

I say, There will be more.

After all the temporary homes and all the stops in between,

this whole country

will be yours.
